

GALLERIES

Comments Print Share Tag on Delicious Digg This

Chris Shepherd: Waiting Patience pays off in Chris Shepherd's new photo exhibit

Favourite Add to Favorites Recommend: 1

BY DAVID BALZER June 09, 2010 21:06

EDITORIAL RATING: To June 19. Tue-Sat 10am-5:30pm; Sun 11am-5:30pm. Bau-Xi Photo, 324 Dundas W. 416-977-0400. www.bau-xiphoto.com.

Chris Shepherd's photographs of subway stations, currently on view at new space Bau-Xi Photo, are straightforward - almost entirely expository, in fact - but they imply some relevant, engaging things. His photos are devoid of people, and the series is called "Waiting," in part indicating what he had to do to achieve his results. In one sense, they are affectionate studies of spaces that are ignored by most commuters who pass through them.

Specifically, they are tributes to functional aesthetics. Subways are tricky things: from Seoul to Prague to Paris, they are branded with the sensibility of the eras and countries in which they are built. "Waiting" focuses on the legacy of '60s, '70s and early-'80s design, still perceived as dated and ugly by many, but which confidently defines so much of the TTC, and with which Shepherd doesn't seem to take issue at all. His images recognize distinctive tones and patterns: the butter yellows of Finch and Christie stations; the orange tiles by the telephones at Ossington and Bay stations. Such late-modernism, once so ubiquitous in Canada, has been removed from many public buildings, but the TTC puts it in formaldehyde. Tellingly, Shepherd has not photographed the ludicrously refurbished Museum station, which he concedes is a crowd-pleaser, but which, in its early-'60s iteration, had been one of his favourite stations.

Shepherd's juxtaposition of Toronto photos with New York ones only emphasizes further what we've got to celebrate. The New York subway, which is of course older and much more of a design collage due to the various private and public interests that shaped it, is less consistent (although there's no mistaking the bolted steel columns). Indeed, Shepherd slips in photos of Lexington Ave/63 Street station for a direct comparison, and he appears to be passing it off as Kipling, with its broad staircases and sensible brown tiles. Neither station may be much to write home about, but our many, bolder versions of this aesthetic find few echoes in New York. In Shepherd's view, i.e., without people, that city's subway seems strangely prosaic; ours has a cool beauty that anyone with half a mind would want to take pride in, and preserve.

Email us at: LETTERS@EYEWEEEKLY.COM or send your questions to EYEWEEEKLY.COM 1 Yonge Street, 2nd Floor, Toronto Ontario, M5E 1E6

User Comments Comment Using Facebook Connect or EyeID or Comment Anonymously

Newest first

Vanessa Jun 11, 2010 10:14 AM

Really cool

Loved the show. Saw it in person on Saturday. Great subject. Gives insight to/makes me proud of our subway system in an unexpected way. Highly recommend a go-see. Agree | Disagree | Offensive

Shawna Jun 10, 2010 1:58 PM

Fantastic in person!

I saw this show last weekend, the presentation is incredible, must see in person. The gallery is across from the AGO. Agree | Disagree | Offensive

Select a City

ABBOTSFORD 83% Off at U Weigh

ALLISTON / INNISFIL Half Off Music Le

AURORA / NEWMA 62% off a Niagara G

Toronto Listings Finder FILM MUSIC CLUBS ARTS Film Finder Films | Theatres All Any Movie Genre Any Movie Rating Any Movie Title Find Film Chart Grab this finder

Related Stories

CONTACT decision maker Don't know what to see at Toronto's biggest photography festival? Check out our handy CONTACT primer.

Refined crude In his ROM photo exhibit about the impact of oil, Edward Burtynsky once again creates haunting images of modern landscapes

The projectionist UK artist Lindsay Seers plays with film history in her Images Festival installation.

- MORE INSIDE EYE WEEKLY Guides Fringe Festival 2009 Pride Guide 2009 Toronto Jazz Festival Guide 2009 Cool Summer Guide 2009 Bar and Patio Guide 2009 Green Living Guide Love and Sex Guide Cheap Thrills

EYEWEEEKLY.COM Write a Letter to the Editor Masthead and Contacts Privacy Policy Employment Opportunities Advertise With Us Distribution Star Media Group Sites canadianimmigrant.ca insurancehotline.com swaymag.ca More Star Pass Sites TheStar.com HomeFinder.ca toronto.com Wheels.ca Ourfaves.com

Copyright 1991 - 2010 EYE WEEKLY Newspapers Limited. All Rights Reserved. Distribution transmission, Republication of any materials is strictly prohibited without the prior written consent of EYE WEEKLY. EYE WEEKLY is a division of Toronto Star Newspapers Limited.

